What Writing Means to Me...

Writing is at the core of our educational process, but its benefits and possibilities extend far beyond the classroom. We asked our very own student experts to share what writing means to them! Hear it in their own words:

"It's a way of expressing myself through creative means. It's a way of telling other people my stories, and showing them my imagination. I also think it's really fun to create characters, world build, and more." - Sophie, Grade 9

"Sometimes, I imagine crazy things that [would be] impossible to happen in real life, and I write about it like it is happening in real life. Also, writing is important to me because it helps me understand spectacular events that could happen in real life." - Sayeon, Grade 4

"There are almost no rules about what you can write."

- Andrew, Grade 4

"I like writing because it gives me time to use my imagination. Writing, to me, means that I get to write about what I like or dislike, or write about something I'm trying to persuade someone to agree with me on something." - Jayden, Grade 6

What Writing Means (continued)

"If I don't want to speak I can write my feelings."
- Harim, Grade 2

"If you couldn't write then it would be hard to explain, understand, and communicate. Without writing people wouldn't have books, letters, computers, and more everyday things."
- Naomi, Grade 6

"It helps us to get or do something that we want. I wrote lots of essays to get my puppy and my parents said ok after reading my essay." - Gyuyeon, Grade 5

"I can write about any subject or anything! Also I could write notes to my cousins and friends." - Kazuki, Grade 3

"Writing is important because we can learn new vocabulary. I like writing because I can write my ideas. Also, I can learn some things in writing." - Ian, Grade 4

"I like writing because people can express feelings, write and make stories and more... You can do many things by writing, and that's why I think writing is important." - Vihaan, Grade 5
